STILL RIOTING IN MOSCOW

FIRST WORD FROM AMBASSADOR FRANCIS RECEIVED SINCE JUNE 24.

(By the Associated Press)
Washington, July 9.—Ambassador Francis at Vologda, Russia, in a despatch dated July 7, bringing the first word from him to the State Department since June 24, has confirmed the report of the assassination of Count Von Mirbach, German ambassador at Moscow. The killing occurred at 3 P. M., July 6, and the latest reports reaching Francis said fighting is still progressing in Moscow streets. Wireless messages to the Soviet government told of the capture of several prominent Bolshevik officials by revolutionists and arrest of revolutionary leaders by the Bolshevik forces.

GERMANS ADMIT NEW TROOPS GOOD FIGHTERS

With the American Army in France, July 9.—An indication of what the German army thinks of the fighting ability of the Americans is given by a copy of an intelligence report of the—(deleted) Germany army, which has just been obtained. The report describing the fighting on the Marne, refers to the—(deleted) American division as a very good one, "almost an attacking division," and adds that the nerves of the Americans have not yet been shaken. The German fire, the report says, had been unable to affect the morale of the Americans, who only lacked the necessary instructions to make them serious adversaries.

Prisoners taken by the Germans, the report states, were physically well built and were aged from 18 to 28 years. Their characteristic utterance is quoted as "We kill or are killed."

The report adds that it is impossible to obtain military information from the Americans, and that they rarely will indicate the positions they occupied in the line.

In general, the report declares, the Americans make good impression. For the moment they continue to consider their part in the war as that of "big brothers" who had come to Europe to assist their "little brothers" and the latter's mothers and sisters, but also declare that they had come overseas to fight for their country.

Most of the Americans, the document adds, are of foreign extraction, "semi-Americans" it calls them, but it admits that their spirit and fighting qualities are remarkable.

JAPANESE WARNED AGAINST HEEDING WILD RUMORS

Tokio, June 2.—(Correspondence)—Governors of the Japanese Empire were warned by Baron Goto, the Japanese Foreign Minister, in an address to them recently to beware of mischievous rumors which were, he said, calculated to estrange relations between Japan and the United States and Japan and China. The Foreign Minister advised the governors to be on their guard against secret enemy emissaries coming through Siberia to stir up trouble in Japan.

Alluding to the pending negotiations for an accord with China, Baron Goto said that the more intelligent persons of China and Japan are trying to reach an effective understanding. In the future, more Chinese would come to Japan and he bespoke for them a cordial and courteous reception as a means of cementing the friendly relations between the two countries.

The opinion that public expressions in Japan are liable to be lacking in a proper consideration for the feelings of the peoples of Japan's allies was expressed by Baron Goto. He said that occasional comments published without proper care or investigation which appear to the allies as unfriendly criticism were most regrettable at a time when Japan is making common cause with the Entente nations and is actuated by no other motive than the expectation of complete victory.

The war, the minister explained, had necessitated certain trade restrictions and Japan's commerce had been affected thereby. But it should be remembered that these restrictions were the result of sheer necessity and that Japan must be prepared to make sacrifices in order to carry on the war to a successful termination. He deplored the fact that the sudden expansion of trade had led to a tendency to export goods of inferior quality. Fortunately, by the combined efforts of the government and of those directly interested in maintaining a genuine standard the production of inferior goods was decreasing, though it had not entirely ceased.

FRENCH ATTACK GAINS MILE

VIGOROUS ATTACK NETS GAINS AND SEVERAL HUNDRED PRISONERS.

(By the Associated Press)
Paris, July 9.—French troops early this morning attacked the German lines on about a two and half mile front west of Anthouil on a front between Montdidier and Oise, realizing an advance of a mile at certain points, the war office announced today. A German counter attack at Loges farm in the area of advance, failed to win back any ground. Prisoners to the number of 450, including fourteen officers were taken by the French. In the Long Point region east of Retz forest the French increased their gains of yesterday taking additional prisoners.

STATE OF UNREST PREVAILS IN IRELAND

(By the Associated Press)

Dublin, July 9.—The unsettled state of the country districts in many parts of Ireland is reflected in the minor news which reaches Dublin. There are occasional rival raids for arms by the police and the Sinn Feiners, frequent reports of illegal drilling, occasional stories of disturbances in which politics evidently play a considerable part.

In County Kerry, one of the hotbeds of the Sinn Fein, the chairman of the County Council has been sentenced to a year's imprisonment for failing to report a raid for arms on his own premises, and the County Council has now decided to ask the Mansion House Conference for "permission to go on strike" as a protest.

The prosecution of the entire thirty-three members of the Board of Guardians of County Limerick for certain violent phrases used by them in an anti-conscription resolution, marks the first occasion even in Ireland, a country not lacking in strange precedents, when the members of a public body sitting at a duly convened meeting have been proceeded against for constituting and unlawful assembly.

The wording of their resolution appears to have been particularly strong. The resolution has not been published, but there are seven clauses in the summons charging the Guardians with "assembling to sow dissension among the subjects of the King, to cause disaffection and to impede the successful prosecution of the war."

SUMMARY OF DAY'S BATTLE

FRENCH STRIKE SMASHING BLOW. BRITISH IN SMALL SIZED RAID.

(By the Associated Press)
French troops struck the German lines a smashing blow early this morning in an area almost directly north of Paris where the Germans were stopping recently after five days of fighting. The attack was delivered along a two and half mile front and gains made at some points for a mile. The attacking forces were assisted by tanks in the drive and apparently all ground gained has been maintained intact. Further to the southeast along the Marne front the French gained additional ground by forcing the Germans farther back. In the Chavigny farm vicinity on the British front there have been only raiding operations. German guns last night were active about positions recently taken by Americans and Australians in the Amiens area south of the Somme. The French war office reports considerable artillery activity to the west and north of Chateau-Thierry on the Marne front.

MANY KILLED IN RAILROAD WRECK

(By the Associated Press)

FORECAST OF CORN AND WHEAT CROP

(By the Associated Press)

One Inch—100 Miles.
Telephone experts declare that if a person speaking over a phone holds the transmitter four inches from his mouth it is equivalent to adding about 220 miles to the line over which he is conversing, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. Carelessness in the manner of using a telephone instrument is one of transmission. The best results are obtained by allowing about half an inch to intervene between the mouth and the transmitter.

Little Meteoric Matter Now.
In the early days of its history the earth grew rapidly by the addition of meteoric matter. It is still growing in the same manner, though scarcely to an appreciable extent, for the masses of meteoric matter added yearly is reckoned to be only 20,000 tons. In the course of ages the larger planets have swept up practically all the fragments of the original disruption, and the only available source of supply of meteoric matter seems to be that brought by comets.

But It Was Sad Reality.
One day Jack was out playing by a ditch when he accidentally fell in. He was afraid of being punished, as he was all covered with mud, so he ran into the kitchen to his mother crying and yelling loudly: "Oh, if it were only a dream! Oh, if it were only a dream!"

Owing to the fact the Byrd's Mill has been put in good condition, and that there is no likelihood of the lake water having to be used in the city, the city commissioners have repealed the order against bathing and it is now open to bathers.

LAST CHANCE FOR VOTERS TO REGISTER

Any voters who failed to register when the books were open some weeks ago will have a last chance to do so in the ten day period from July 17 to 27.

J. W. Cowling, registrar for Pontotoc County, advises that those who registered two years ago might do well to register again, since the records were destroyed in the court house fire last October and some trouble might arise if a man has lost his registration certificate. Every voter desiring to register at this time should see the registrar of his voting precinct during the period named.

HOSPITALS IN ENGLAND FOR AMERICAN WOUNDED

London, June 9.—(Correspondence of the Associated Press.)—Convalescent American soldiers from the battlefields of France and Flanders soon will be familiar sights on the streets of London. Already many of the American wounded are being cared for in hospitals here but plans are being made to bring all or practically all across the Channel.

Those declared unfit for further duty will be sent back to the United States as rapidly as possible and the question of sending over for the later stages of convalescence those whose complete restoration is certain but which will require many months, is understood to be under consideration.

The Medical Department of the army took steps early this month to establish two more base hospitals at English ports and to increase the facilities at those now in operation, and the Red Cross is preparing to open a 3,000 bed hospital.

The largest hospital now used by the American army is one in France equipped to care for 3,500 patients. As a part of the plan for restoring the wounded in England instead of France there has been placed at the head of the American army's Medical Department here a general officer, General Winter.

One of the reasons for the decision to bring the American wounded here for treatment was the conviction that recovery in many cases would be hastened by the absence from the depressing proximity to the battle fronts, and that the men would become fit for active service in less time if in the environment of a people speaking their own language.

The operation is on in full force and satisfactory development, the statement adds. More than a thousand prisoners so far have been taken by the entente allied forces.

Italian troops yesterday advanced their front line in the region of Col la Pribe, the Italian war office announced today. In the Monte Grappa region the Italians gained further ground northward of Massic, on Saturday. Eight enemy airplanes were destroyed yesterday in air battles.

"OUTWITTING THE HUN"

CHAPTER XII.

The Forged Passport.

For obvious reasons, I cannot describe the man to whom I applied for the passport nor the house in which he lived. While, in view of what subsequently happened, I would not be very much concerned if he got into trouble for having dealt with me, I realize that the hardships he had endured in common with the other inhabitants of that conquered city may possibly have distorted his idea of right and justice, and I shall not deliberately bring further disaster on him by revealing his identity.

This man—we will call him Huyliker because that is as unlike his name as it is mine—was very kind to me on that memorable night when I aroused him from his sleep and in a few words of explanation told him of my plight.

He invited me inside, prepared some food for me and, putting on a dressing gown, came and sat by me while I ate, listening with the greatest interest to the short account of my adventures.

He could speak English fluently, and he interrupted me several times to express his sympathy for the sufferings I had endured.

"O'Brien," he said, after I had concluded my story, "I am going to help you. It may take several days—perhaps as long as two weeks—but eventually we will provide the means to enable you to get to Holland."

I thanked him a thousand times and told him that I didn't know how I could possibly repay him. "Don't think of that," he replied; "the satisfaction of knowing that I have aided in placing one more victim of the Hun beyond their power to harm will more than repay me for all the risk I shall run in helping you. You'd better turn in now, O'Brien, and in the morning I'll tell you what I plan to do."

As I removed my clothes and noticed that my knees were still swollen to twice their normal size, that my left ankle was black and blue from the wrench I had given it when I jumped from the train and that my ribs showed through my skin, I realized what a lot I had been through. As a matter of fact, I could not have weighed more than one hundred and fifty pounds at that time, whereas I had tipped the scales at one hundred and ninety when I was with my squadron in France.

I lost no time in getting into bed and still less in getting to sleep. I don't know what I dreamed of that night, but I had plenty of time to go through the experiences of my whole life, for when I was aroused by a knock on the door and Huyliker entered in response to my invitation to enter, he told me that it was nearly noon! I had slept for almost twelve hours.

I cannot say that the thought did not run through my head that perhaps after all I was living in a fool's paradise, and that when Huyliker reappeared it would be with a couple of German soldiers behind him, but I dismissed such misgivings summarily, realizing that I was doing Huyliker an injustice to let such things enter my head even for an instant. I had no right to doubt his sincerity and it would do me no good to entertain such suspicions. If he was going to prove treacherous to me, I was powerless in any way to cope with him.

In a few moments my host reappeared with a tray containing my breakfast. I don't suppose I shall ever forget that meal. It consisted of a cup of coffee—real coffee, not the kind I had had at Courtral—several slices of bread, some hot potatoes and a dish of scrambled eggs.

Every mouthful of that meal tasted like angel-food to me and Huyliker sat on the edge of the bed and watched me enjoying it, at the same time outlining the plans he had made for my escape.

In brief, the scheme was to conceal me in a convent until conditions were ripe for me to make my way to the border. In the meanwhile I was to be dressed in the garb of a priest, and when the time came for me to leave the city I was to pretend that I was a Spanish sailor, because I could speak a little Spanish, which I had picked up on the coast. To attempt to play the part of a Belgian would become increasingly difficult, he pointed out, and would bring inevitable disaster in the event that I was called upon to speak.

Huyliker said I would be given sufficient money to bribe the German guards at the Dutch frontier, and he assured me that everything would work out according to schedule.

"Tours is not the first case, O'Brien, we have handled successfully," he declared. "Only three weeks ago I heard from an English merchant who had escaped from a German detention camp and came to me for assistance and whom I had been able to get through the lines. His message telling me of his safe arrival in Rotterdam came to me in an indirect way, of course, but the fact that the plans we had made carried through without mishap makes me feel that we ought to be able to do as much for you."

Outlining the Plans He Had Made for My Escape.

I told Huyliker I was ready to follow his instructions and would do anything he suggested.

"I want to rejoin my squadron as soon as I possibly can," I told him, "but I realize that it will take a certain length of time for you to make the necessary arrangements, and I will be as patient as I can."

The first thing to do, Huyliker told me, was to prepare a passport. He had a blank one and it was a comparatively simple matter to fill in the spaces, using a genuine passport which Huyliker possessed as a sample of the handwriting of the passport clerk. My occupation was entered as that of a sailor. My birthplace we gave as Spain, and we put my age at thirty. As a matter of fact, at that time I could easily have passed for thirty-five, but we figured that with proper food and a decent place to sleep at night, I could soon regain my normal appearance, and the passport would have to serve me, perhaps, for several weeks to come.

Filling in the blank spaces on the passport was, as I have said, a comparatively easy matter, but that did not begin to fill the bill. Every genuine passport bore an official rubber stamp, something like an elaborate postmark, and I was at a loss to know how to get over that difficulty.

Fortunately, however, Huyliker had half of a rubber stamp which had evidently been thrown away by the Germans, and he planned to construct the other half out of the cork of a wine bottle. He was very skillful with a penknife, and although he spoilt a score or more of corks before he succeeded in getting anything like the result he was after, the finished article was far better than our most sanguine expectations. Indeed, after we had pared it over here and there, and removed whatever imperfections our repeated test disclosed, we had a stamp which made an impression so closely resembling the original that without a magnifying glass, we were sure, it would have been impossible to tell that it was a counterfeit.

Huyliker procured a camera and took a photograph of me to paste on the passport in the place provided for that purpose, and we then had a passport which was entirely satisfactory to both of us and would, we hoped, prove equally so to our friends the Huns.

It had taken two days to fix up the passport. In the meanwhile Huyliker informed me that he had changed his plans about the convent and that instead he would take me to an empty house, where I could remain in safety until he told me it was advisable for me to proceed to the frontier.

This was quite agreeable to me, as I had had misgivings as to the kind of a priest I would make and it seemed to me to be safer to remain aloof from everyone in a deserted house than to have to mingle with people or come in contact with them, even with the best of disguises.

That night I accompanied Huyliker to a fashionable section of the city, where the house in which I was to be concealed was located.

This house turned out to be a four-story structure of brick. Huyliker told me that it had been occupied by a wealthy Belgian before the war, but since 1914 it had been uninhabited save for the occasional habitation of some refugee whom Huyliker was befriending.

Huyliker had a key and let me in, but he did not enter the house with me, stating that he would visit me in the morning.

I explored the place from top to bottom as well as I could without lights. The house was elaborately furnished, but, of course, the dust lay a quarter of an inch thick everywhere. It was a large house, containing some twenty rooms. There were two rooms in the basement four on the first floor, four on the second five on the third and five on the top. In the days that were to come I was to have plenty of opportunity to familiarize myself with the contents of that house but at that time I did not know it and I was curious enough to want to know just what the house contained.

Down in the basement there was a huge pantry but it was absolutely bare, except of dust and dirt. A door which evidently led to a sub-basement attracted my attention and I thought it might be a good idea to know just where it led to in case it became necessary for me to elude searchers.

In that cellar I found case after case of choice wine—Huyliker subsequently told me that there were 1,800 bottles of it! I was so happy at the turn my affairs had taken and in the rosy prospects which I now entertained that I was half inclined to indulge in a little celebration then and there. On second thought, however, I remembered the old warning of the folly of shouting before you are well out of the woods, and I decided that it would be just as well to postpone the festivities for a while and go to bed instead.

In such an elaborately furnished house I had naturally conjured up ideas of a wonderfully large bed, with thick hair mattress, downy quilts and big soft pillows. Indeed, I debated for a while which particular bedroom I should honor with my presence that night. Judge of my disappointment, therefore, when after visiting bedroom after bedroom, I discovered that there wasn't a bed in any one of them that was in a condition to sleep in. All the mattresses had been removed and the rooms were absolutely bare of everything in the way of wool, silk or cotton fabrics. The Germans had apparently swept the house clean.

There was nothing to do, therefore, but to make myself as comfortable as I could on the floor, but as I had grown accustomed by this time to sleeping under far less comfortable conditions, I swallowed my disappointment as cheerfully as I could and lay down for the night.

In the morning Huyliker appeared and brought me some breakfast, and after I had eaten it he asked me what connections I had in France or England from whom I could obtain money.

I told him that I banked at Cox & Co., London, and that if he needed any money I would do anything I could to get it for him, although I did not know just how such things could be arranged.

"Don't worry about that, O'Brien," he replied. "We'll find a way of getting it all right. What I want to know is how far you are prepared to go to compensate me for the risks I am rendering you!"

The change in the man's attitude stunned me. I could hardly believe my ears.

"Of course I shall pay you as well as I can for what you have done, Huyliker," I replied, trying to conceal as far as possible the disappointment his demand had occasioned me, "but I don't think that this is hardly the proper time or occasion to talk of compensation? All I have on me, as you know, is a few hundred francs, and that, of course, you are welcome to, and when I get back, if I ever do, I shall not easily forget that kindness you have shown me. I am sure you need have no concern about my showing my gratitude in a substantial way."

"That's all right, O'Brien," he insisted, looking at me in a knowing sort of way; "you may take care of me afterwards, and then again you may not. I'm not satisfied to wait. I want to be taken care of now!"

"Well, what do you want me to do? How much do you expect in the way of compensation? How can I arrange to get it to you? I am willing to do anything that is reasonable."

"I want — pounds," he replied, and he named a figure that staggered me. If I had been Lord Kitchener instead of just an ordinary lieutenant in the R. F. C., he would hardly have asked a larger sum. Perhaps he thought I was.

"Well, my dear man," I said smilingly, thinking that perhaps he was joking, "you don't really mean that, do you?"

"I certainly do, O'Brien, and what is more," he threatened, "I intend to get every cent I have asked, and you are going to help me get it."

He pulled out an order calling for the payment to him of the amount he had mentioned and demanded that I sign it.

I waved it aside. "Huyliker," I said, "you have helped me out so far and perhaps you have the power to help me further. I appreciate what you have done for me, although now, I think, I see what your motive was, but I certainly don't intend to be blackmailed and I tell you right now that I won't stand for it."

"Very well," he said, "it is just as you say, but before you make up your mind so obstinately I would advise you to think it over. I'll be back this evening."

My first impulse, after the man had left, was to get out of that house just as soon as I could. I had the passport he had prepared for me, and I figured that even without further help I could now get to the border without very much difficulty, and when I got there I would have to use my own ingenuity to get through.

It was evident, however, that Huyliker still had an idea that I might change my mind with regard to the payment he had demanded, and I decided that it would be foolish to do anything until he paid me a second visit.

At the beginning of my dealings with Huyliker I had turned over to him some pictures, papers, and other things that I had on me when I entered his house, including my identification disk, and I was rather afraid that he might refuse to return them to me.

All day long I remained in the house without a particle of food other than the breakfast Huyliker had brought to me. From the windows I could see plenty to interest me and help pass the time away, but of my experiences while in that house I shall tell in detail later on, confining my attention now to a narrative of my dealing with Huyliker.

That night he appeared as he had promised. "Well, O'Brien," he asked, as he entered the room where I was awaiting him, "what do you say? Will you sign the order or not?"

It had occurred to me during the day that the amount demanded was so fabulous that I might have signed the order without any danger of its ever being paid, but the idea of this man, who had claimed to be befriending me, endeavoring to make capital out of my plight galled me so that I was determined not to give it to him whether I could do so in safety or not.

"No, Huyliker," I replied. "I have decided to get along as best I can without any further assistance from you. I shall see that you are reasonably paid for what you have done, but I will not accept any further assistance from you at any price, and what is more I want you to return to me at once all the photographs and other papers and belongings of mine which I turned over to you a day or two ago!"

"I'm sorry about that, O'Brien," he retorted, with a show of apparent sincerity, "but that is something I cannot do."

"If you don't give me back those papers at once," I replied hotly, "I will take steps to get them, and a—d—quick too!"

"I don't know just what you could do, O'Brien," he declared coolly, "but as a matter of fact the papers and pictures you refer to are out of the country. I could not get them back to you if I wanted to."

Something told me the man was lying.

"See here, Huyliker!" I threatened, advancing towards him, putting my hand on his shoulder and looking him straight in the eye, "I want those papers and I want them here before midnight to-night. If I don't get them I shall sleep in this place just once more and then, at 8 o'clock to-morrow morning, I shall go to the German arranged."

"Your Lives Won't Be Worth a Damn."

authorities, give myself up, show them the passport that you fired for me, tell them how I got it, and explain everything."

Huyliker paled. We had no lights in the house, but we were standing near a landing at the time and the moonlight was streaming through a stained-glass window.

UNFLINCHING SPIRIT OF AMERICAN FIGHTERS

(By the Associated Press)

South Bend, Ind., July 9.—"Blood soaked and weary, but brave and cheerful," is the way Miss Kathryn Carlisle, a Red Cross worker in France, describes Americans returning from battle to the canteen, in a letter to her father, C. A. Carlisle of this city.

"Our boys, with bayonet and shell wounds, will telly on quickly and firmly, 'I'm alright, I can wait. Look after Jim; he's been gassed.'"

"Here is a toast one of our brave officers left with us," continues Miss Carlisle, who has been in France a year. "It expresses the attitude of our boys toward us better than any word of mine:

"To our women who sent us forth with courage in their hearts and tears in their eyes.

"To our women at home who are sacrificing all that we may win.

"To our women over here who give their own lives that we may live.

"God bless them, and damn the man that does not respect them and the coward that does not protect them."

"Over five thousand American trucks, all heavily laden, have passed our front door in the last big drive. Every man in charge came in for a rest and refreshments and a little chat with one of his native tongue, then with the smile of the soldier and a wave of the hand in farewell, 'Good bye until we meet again.'"

"A splendid General came in the other day and he was a sight. His clothes were white with dust and his face black for want of a shave. The canteen was packed, it was one of our busy days. The General wanted to shave and wash up before eating, and the only spot vacant and available was the small private dressing room, used exclusively by us American women. We excluded all the women, put the General in our private dressing room, with hot and cold water, and on the outside of the door

MAZOLA does for American cooking what olive oil does for French

THE reason the French are so free from digestive troubles is they never use lard. Animal fats make the food heavy and soggy—they soak into the food.

Mazola, the rich, sweet oil from corn, is used so much hotter than any animal fat—it just crisps over the food. It keeps in all the natural flavor. It's better—and better for you.

No odors through the house when Mazola is used. Being an oil it doesn't have to be melted—measurements exact—no waste.

In the best homes and restaurants everywhere they are using Mazola on salads and for a vegetable dressing. As good as the best olive oil—and only costs half as much.

Mazola saves animal fats.

If you want to be sure of a pure, golden oil—always the same, delicate and delicious for all cooking and salad uses—see that you get Mazola. Mazola is always uniform. Its preparation is scientific and exact.

For sale in pints, quarts and gallons. (The large sizes are especially economical). Get a can from your grocer today.

Ask your grocer for the valuable Cook Book especially prepared for Mazola users—or write us direct. FREE.

MIXUP IN MICHIGAN SENATORIAL RACE

Detroit, July 9.—Developments that find no precedent in the political history of the state have given Michigan's primary campaign this year an unusual interest which centers largely in the race for the senatorial nomination. The primary election will be held August 27.

The Democrats in state conference precipitated a situation that promises to upset early calculations. The conference endorsed Henry Ford, as Democratic candidate for the senatorial nomination, despite the fact that he had been regarded as a Republican possibility, and invited the Republicans to unite with them in supporting him. Then came Ford's announcement, after a conference with President Wilson, that he would accept the nomination if it were tendered him. He did not specify, however, whether he would make the race as a Republican or Democratic candidate, and the situation was further complicated.

The action of the Democratic state conference has been denounced by Michigan Republicans as an attempt to split their party. Chas. S. Osborn, former governor and a candidate for the Republican senatorial nomination, has declined flatly to accept the Democratic proposal that he with two other Republican candidates withdraw from the race, and has indicated his intention of making a vigorous campaign.

ous campaign. Fred M. Warner, also a former governor, who had announced his candidacy, withdrew from the race, but coupled with his withdrawal a statement supporting Ford as the Republican, but not the Democratic candidate.

Truman H. Newberry, who served in Roosevelt's cabinet, is the other Republican mentioned for the nomination. Mr. Newberry has never made a direct avowal of his candidacy, but the Newberry campaign committee has announced its intention of making a vigorous campaign in his behalf.

Mr. Ford has had nothing to say since his statement that he would accept the nomination if it were tendered him. It is understood he will make no campaign. Should his name go on both Republican and Democratic tickets at the primary, under the law he must choose within five days after canvass of the ballots the ticket on which he will seek election.

Governor Albert E. Sleeper, Republican, is a candidate for renomination. John W. Bailey, of Battle Creek, is a candidate for the Democratic nomination for the governorship.

Doing hard work in a bent or stooping position puts a stitch in the back that is painful. If the muscles have become strained, you can't get rid of it without help. The great penetrating power of BALLARD'S SNOW LINIMENT will appeal to you most strongly at such times, because it is the very thing you need. Price 25c, 50c and $1.00 a bottle. Sold by Bart Smith.

DATA ON COTTON CROP OF LAST YEAR

Washington, D. C., July 9.—Director of the Census Sam L. Rogers will shortly issue a pamphlet entitled "Cotton Production in the United States, 1917," which was prepared under the supervision of Mr. William L. Austin, chief statistician for cotton.

The crop of 1917, according to the returns of the growers, amounted to 12,448,242 running bales, counting round as half bales, equivalent to 11,302,375 bales of 500 pounds gross weight. With one exception, it was the smallest crop produced since 1900, that of 1915 amounting to only 11,068,173 bales. Compared with the crop of 1916, there was a falling off in Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Missouri, North Carolina, Tennessee, Texas, and Virginia, and an increase in Arizona, California, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi, Oklahoma, and South Carolina. The most notable increase was in Louisiana, where the production was 629,719 bales, the largest for any year since 1907.

Weather conditions affected the crop to a greater extent than usual. Texas, with a largely increased acreage, showed a reduced production, the crop in the southwestern section, owing to extreme drought, being almost a total failure.

Although the amount of cotton grown in Arizona and California is still relatively small, the increase in these states is notable. Compared with the crop of 1916, the gainings in Arizona increased from 8,000 to 21,000 bales and in California from 44,000 to 57,000 bales. The production in these states from the crop of 1918 promises a further increase, since the acreage planted in both states is much above that devoted to cotton last year.

The sea island cotton crop of 1917—22,619 bales—shows a falling off of 25,000 bales, as compared with 1916; however, it closely approaches the average production of sea-island cotton for the nineteen-year period during which the Census office has collected statistics of cotton ginned.

Only two counties produced as much as 100,000 bales of cotton in 1917: Bolivar in Mississippi, with 110,307 bales, and Ellis in Texas, with 105,471 bales. Other counties which led in their respective states in the production of cotton from the crop of 1917 were Madison in Alabama, Jefferson in Arkansas, Alachua in Florida, Burke in Georgia, Caddo (parish) in Louisiana, Davy in Missouri, Johnston in North Carolina, Garvin in Oklahoma, Orangeburg in South Carolina, and Shelby in Tennessee.

AIRMAN'S STRATEGY DEPENDS ON WILL

(By the Associated Press)

Chicago, July 8.—"My strategy depends on my will," declares the "Ace of Aces," Lieut. Fonck, in an interview with Henri Simon, published in the June 8 issue of the Plane News, printed by soldiers in France and just received here. "I put in my will in operation to maintain tranquility in my mind and body," continues Lieut. Fonck, whose interlarded aerial exploits over the German battle lines have thrilled the military world.

"When one fights it is necessary to fight with all one's faculties. I will to use mine, and then I am guided by careful observation and take advantage of favorable circumstances. That is how, in this battle where I brought down six German planes (will you be so good as to say that Second Lieut. Fontaine and Lieut. Battle follow me into this battle, which was a warm one), I say I simply got in the midst of the enemy planes. You understand my object. I hampered the maneuvers of each of them, and I watched, and at the first lack of decision on the part of the adversary I took advantage of his mistake and brought him down. I got the two first in ten seconds and also the two last."

"Were you accompanied in the last exploit, Lieutenant, the day before yesterday?"

"Yes, I was in company with Sgt. Brugere and 2nd Lt. Tonseller. I always take some young and courageous aviators with me to give them training and put the finishing touches on them. They conducted themselves marvelously. So it was in this last combat I brought down three planes and the fourth was probably brought down by Sgt. Brugere."

"How long did it take you to bring down these three planes?"

"That is quick."

"Yes, for you, but for me it was a little long."

"What minute in your career as a military aviator was the most tragic?"

"Tragic! No. Say most thrilling. It was when I brought down my six planes. It was the first time I was engaged with such strong opposition. Remember, there were two enemy patrols and I brought down my two last machines in a patrol of nine German planes. One could not miss his shot and under the circumstances, I assure you, I had need of all my coolness."

"But the thrill?"

"That came afterwards. When the battle was over the reaction came. I was a little nervous, but I can overcome that. One must have coolness, and I have got it, and now that sort of thing amuses me."

And gallantly waving his hand in farewell, Lt. Fonck got in his gray machine, took the steering wheel and darted off at full speed.

Example of German Justice

New York, July 9.—German courts martial evidently administer the law with a stern hand in the attempt to prevent the spread in Germany of Bolshevik doctrines. Their application of the law was denounced in the Reichstag by the socialist, Dr. Cohn, as a disgrace to German justice, according to the Cologne Gazette.

Citing instances to show how severe those sentences had been, Dr. Cohn said that a woman who stooped to pick up her hat which had fallen on the ground near a trolley car was sentenced to serve one and one half years in a penitentiary on a charge of attempting to endanger transportation.

Dr. Cohn said he could enumerate dozens of similar cases.

WOULD WALK FLOOR HALF OF THE NIGHT

In Misery Two Years But Tanlac Brings Relief After Everything Else Failed.

"Tanlac brought me relief after everything else failed to do me any good, and I am a stronger and healthier woman today than I have been in a long time," recently declared Mrs. William R. Whitaker, of 1712 New York Avenue, Fort Worth, Texas.

"My health was fine up to two years ago," she continued, "then my digestion failed. Everything I ate soured and felt like lead in my stomach, gas rose and pressed on my heart so I was afraid something was wrong with it. My liver was out of order too, and I often had spells of dizziness. My head ached awfully and I would walk the floor half the night, too nervous to sleep. I had rheumatic pains in all my joints and my shoulders and hips would ache so I could hardly stand it and I became so despondent that I came near breaking down."

"One of my friends had been relieved by Tanlac and advised me to try it, so I started on it, also taking the Tanlac tablets and I soon felt the medicine was straightening me out. My appetite is now better than ever, my system is regular and the rheumatism is nearly all gone. My nerves are quieter, I sleep like a child and get up in the mornings feeling splendid. I can go on with my housework without tiring out and am better in every way than I have been in two years."

Tanlac is sold in Ada by Gwin & Mays Drug Company, and by leading druggists and dealers everywhere.

DIALOGUE BETWEEN GERMAN AND HOLLANDER

(By the Associated Press)

Amsterdam, July 9.—An imaginary dialogue between a Dutchman and a German, published in the Telegraaf, shows the state of public opinion over the German refusal to permit Dutch ships to sail for America to bring wheat for Holland.

"Why are you always pestering me? Why don't you hold your tongue?" the German demanded.

"But why can't I have wheat for my bread?" asked the Dutchman.

"What do I care about that? Don't I send you coal?"

"Yes, but—"

"None of your impudence," retorts the German. "And what do you send me in exchange?"

"Vegetables, cheese and milk. Also meat, and a little of everything besides. And I give you credit for it, too," replies the Hollander.

"What are you complaining about, then? Be thankful that I still allow you to trade with me. I might have taken everything I wanted of you without giving you a scrap in return."

"Have you the right to do so?"

"Right! I make my own right," is the German response.

"But my wheat?"

"Why should you have wheat? Have you any wheat?"

"At least allow us to give tonnage to America in exchange for wheat."

"Certainly not. If you give tonnage you strengthen the enemy, and he who does that is my enemy also."

"And what do you do to your enemy?"

"I club him to death and take all his possessions."

"Then I give up tonnage you club me to death, and if I don't, I starve to death?"

"I don't object," says the German. "Do I ask you to keep alive? It is we who must live; you don't matter."

A drowsy, half-sick, discouraged feeling is caused by a torpid liver and impurities in the stomach and bowels. Prickly Ash Bitters is a prompt and efficient remedy. Try it. Price $1.25 per bottle.—Gwin & Mays Drug Co.

STATE ISSUES NEW MAP OF OIL FIELDS

(By the Associated Press)

Oklahoma City, Okla., July 9.—A map of Oklahoma, showing the various oil pipe lines was completed this week by the engineering department of the Oklahoma Corporation Commission, and upon application copies will be sent to citizens of Oklahoma who are interested.

Shown on the map are 2,184.55 miles of trunk pipe lines, for the transportation of crude oil, and 3,345.42 miles of gathering lines, running from the various fields to the main lines.

The main lines handle an average of 238,300 barrels each 24 hours, according to reports to the conservation division of the corporation commission. Fully as much, if not more oil is handled by the tank cars on the various railroads.

Some of these lines in Oklahoma are but parts of large pipe line systems, some of which extend to Baton Rouge, to Fort Worth, to Galveston and to St. Louis. One company has six lines extending from the Oklahoma centers of oil production to the Great Lakes and to the Atlantic seaboard. Most of the pipe lines are eight inches in diameter, but a few are six and one is 12. In general, the pipe lines converge in Tulsa or Cushing, in the northeastern part of the state.

According to a notation on the new map, there are 54 oil refineries in the state, with a daily capacity of 210,375 barrels. There are between 400 and 500 plants for the making of casing head gasoline. Of these 193 reported to the commission before the completion of the map, giving the combined production of the 193 is 9,726 barrels each 24 hours.

The gas and electric division of the commission is preparing a similar map for the gas trunk lines, and electrical distribution systems, but this latter map will not be ready before the early fall.

MISS DAVIS DELIGHTS AUDIENCE AT NORMAL

One of the greatest intellectual treats of the summer was offered by the Normal yesterday in the presentation of Miss Frances Dinmore Davis, one of the foremost readers of the Southwest, in two programs. Miss Davis has just returned to Oklahoma from a year's study in New York City, where she has been working under David Bispham, who is numbered among the really great teachers of interpretive reading. Those who had heard Miss Davis before were greatly pleased with the added growth and power in her work, which has always been of a high order.

Miss Davis' first program, given at the regular chapel period yesterday morning, as the Merchant of Venice. Her interpretation of the different characters was admirable in every way. Her technique is beyond reproach, and the students of East Central have been most fortunate in having this opportunity to observe work of this kind so far beyond the ordinary. And the many who might not have been interested from the standpoint of technique carried away with them warm, living pictures of Portia, Shylock, Bassanio, and Antonio that they will not soon forget. Shakespeare's characters can never seem other than real to those who see such interpretations as Miss Davis'.

Yesterday evening, at 8:30, Miss Davis gave a lecture-reading on Barrie to a highly appreciative audience. After a delightful talk on Barrie, the man, she passed to the consideration of his writings. Her reading of the first act of our old favorite, Peter Pan, was charming and made one wish that she might be induced to forget questions of time and give the remainder of the play. At the conclusion of the evening's program, she read the familiar one-act play called the Twelve Pound Look. Her interpretation of Barrie's whimsicalities is a delight to an audience, and the evening was one of unalloyed pleasure.

Miss Davis has an exceedingly charming personality, combined with unusual ability. Her work in New York City this past year excited the most favorable criticism, and a brilliant future is predicted for her. The Normal feels that it was most fortunate in securing her for an appearance this summer. It is seldom that it is possible to secure artists of Miss Davis' type in the smaller institutions. Oklahoma may well be proud of her as a citizen.

REPORT OF ADA EMERGENCY HOME

Rehearsal Wednesday Night
The members of the Queen Esther company are requested to be present at the normal at 8:30 Wednesday evening to rehearse for the second performance to be given at the close of the normal next week. Bring books.

The business men have volunteered to furnish 15 autos to transport the company to Camp Bowie to present the cantata to the soldiers and the question will be decided at the Wednesday evening rehearsal. Be present.

Your liberality in buying War Savings Stamps indicates that you are helping the boys "over there" on to Berlin.

Weary World for the Pup.
Russell, four, was delighted when his grandpa gave him a puppy for his birthday, so we were rather surprised a couple of days later when he announced that he was going to send "Daisy" back home again to grandma.
